EBOLA

The question is . . . Why?
Are bats a delicacy or necessity?
Is bat-hunting in Guinea,
in the village of Gueckedou,
for sport or dinner?
And, hunger is not funny!

Like many in the Congo, today,
eat grass
there are no more snakes left to eat
And, hunger is not funny!

Is preparing bat-meat for supper
a tradition or necessity?
can we learn from the Congo?

Ebola visited you, Congo
back in '76
said some were eating gorilla meat
some gorillas ate bat-meat too.
Well, why not?
Hunger is not funny!

It's not like they're relatives
or, "sacred apes"

or, something.

Just something to eat

No supermarkets in the village,

in Gueckedou

the bat-meat is fresh

And hunger is not funny!!

Fritz Pointer 2014

The most compelling reason to believe that coronavirus is not human-made is that the recent coronavirus closely resembles two other viruses that triggered outbreaks in recent decades, SARS-CoV and MERS-CoV. All three viruses seem to have originated in bats.